Ladies' Collars, Cuffs, Ruchings, Rufflings, Ties, Lace Scarfs, Linen and Silk Handker-chiefs and Kid Gloves.
Worsteds, Germantown Wool, Shetland Wool and Floss, Saxony and German Knitting Yarns, in all colors, and Embroidery Canvases. have lately received seven letters, three during the last week, asking whether it is "grammatical" to say I feel bad, or I feel badly.

As to the former momentous inquiry, I might truly say I don't know which is right, and I

As to the former momentous inquiry, I might truly say I don't know which is right, and I don't care. It is not worthy of five minutes' consideration by any reasonable human creature. Either form of expression is perfectly intelligible, and both have the support of good usage. As to the latter, which, trifling as it is, does really present a point for decision, there seems to me no doubt that "I feel bad" is right. I cannot believe that any one of my querists who, rising in the morning, felt low-spirited, would say, "I feel bluely," but "I feel blue." Nor would any one who speaks English well without thinking about it (and only such persons speak well,) say "the grass looks greenly," but "the grass looks green." But we say, and should say. "that woman dresses badly," or the air bites keenly." When the verb expresses action or suffering, an adverb is required; but when it expresses a condition of the speaker, as "I feel bad," or an appearance to him, as "the grass looks green," an adjective is proper. But even under these conditions good usage and good sense admit both forms. We may say either "the sun shines brightly," or "the sun shines bright," "the river flows darkly," or "the river flows dark." There are many such cases in which the adjective is the better word; and a solicitious use of adverbs is rather a sign of grammar-and-dictionary style of speech and of writing than of one which comes of a spontaneous conformity to good usage and an unconscious mastery of one's mother tongue. And taneous conformity to good usage and an un conscious mastery of one's mother tongue. And it should be added that no one can learn to speak good English or "good grammar" by fretting over such questions as these; that is to be attained only by an unconscious conformity to the usage of the best speakers and writers. as I have had occasion to say before. - Richard Grant White in N. Y. Times.

BEWARE OF HAIR-WASHES!-Ladies, fair ladies, beware of hair-washes. A medical friend informs me that it has lately been discovered that the active ingredient of all washes for subduing gray hair is lead, which uniting gradually with the natural sulpbur of the hair forms a black sulphuret of lead which is really the darkening agent. We all know how deletrious and even fatal is the application of lead in any chemical shape to the pores of the human body; what, thee, must be the mischiel produced by its being continuously and often daily rubbed into the delicate skin of a lady's scalp? Here, however, is a practical illustration, vouched for by Mr. Brownfield, of Norwich. The wash had been used for two years, but only very moderately, and during all that time there was general malaise and loss of muscular power. About three months since, two days after an effectual application of the wash, a slight epileptic fit occurred, and six weeks afterwards a similar application was followed by palsy of the extensor muscles of the left hand. In this case probably another dose might have produced paralysis; but by this time suspicion was aroused, and by the steady application of antidotes the symptoms are now disappearing. The profits of selling these washes are said to be so tempting that, since the secret of the agent has oczed out, numerous hair dressers, both in town and country, are manufacturing them and pressing them upon their customers.

ANTS AS A BAROMETER.-Mr. L. C. Wuizbach is no longer a disbeliever in the intuitive perception of insects. A few days ago a lot of small red ants made their appearance in one of the rooms of his residence in great numbers, many of them burdened with eggs which they had originally deposited in their subterranean home in the yard. They were carefully watched, and their object in moving was studied. They were observed to go underneath a large trunk which sat in the room, and it was presently raised to see what the insects were doing under it. It was found that they were leaving their eggs there. They were not disturbed, and Mr. Wurzbach continued to study their movements. He anticipated that the intuition of the insects had led them to move their eggs to a place of safety, fearing rain, and this proved true. It was not long before a heavy shower fell, and the ant bed in the yard was flooded, but the instinct of the little bugs had saved them from any loss-they had moved indoors to keep dry. After the rain was over, and when the skies were clear, they returned to their outside home. Mr. Wurzbich has thrown away his barometer, and will hereafter be guided by these little anta in making his rain bets. - Sun Antonio Ec-

While he mechanically munched his muffins and manfully wrestled with the juicy porterhouse in a manner that proved he had both appetite and reputation at stake, she read to him aloud from the morning paper—"the princess dress is also much worn—in fact, it is the most popular pattern that has been introduced, though the skirt is often so elaborately trimmed it is very difficult to tell whether it is princess or polonaise," and then she stopped, but the muffins didn't. "Fred," she coaxingly continued, "don't you think your little wife would become a princess?" The muffins had a momentary respite, while the idiot indulged his festive fancy, and criticised her shabby syntax. "Very probably, my dear, you might were I once snugly sodded down, and some king's son fell in love with you!" It was a hollow pleasantry, but, woman like, she fell to thinking, and, absent-mindedly, putting two spoons and no sugar in his third cup of coffee, she wondered how nice it must be to inherit the purple, and what would be were she ever forgiven this WOLFF'S ACME BLACKING-Its lustre and blackness of color is unrivalled by any other blacking. It is more protection to the leather than oils, because its use will shield the leather against the continual changes from wet to dry.
